Hulmeville P.-T. A. Will Provide Some Eye-Glasses

HULMEVILLE, Jan. 21.—A decision was made at a meeting of the Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association last evening that monies now in the treasury of the organization be used to defray expenses of eye examinations and purchase of glasses for several pupils in need of such, who are unable to provide for themselves at this time.

The sum in the treasury is believed sufficient at present to supply examination and glasses for five or six pupils. Joseph Keen, president, named Mrs. Ralph Bentley and Samuel J. Illick as members of the committee to care for the project. It was reported by teachers that a few of the students need optical treatment at once, as their school work is hampered, and parents in some instances are unable to provide for the expense.

A donation was made to the cafeteria in order to pay current expenses. A number of tots are being furnished hot lunches free at present, some being unable to make remuneration. A rising vote of thanks was extended the teachers for their interest and work in the cafeteria.

William Vornhold was named as the P. T. A. representative to the borough welfare committee.

Thirty-five adults were present to participate in the business and enjoy the entertainment features. Charles H. Boehm, Morrisville, newly-appointed assistant superintendent of the county public schools, showed moving pictures taken in some northern climes, Norway and Lapland; as well as films of the county's public school athletic and scholastic meets. Several from the local school were shown in the latter set of pictures.

Remarks were made by Rev. James Gilbert, rector of Grace P. E. Church, who also pronounced the benediction.

CONFERENCE FAILS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—Abandonment of the Lausanne Reparations Conference was attributed in governmental circles here today as due chiefly to three causes:

1. The refusal of the United States to participate, even to the extent of sending an unofficial observer.

2. Failure of France and Great Britain to arrive at any sort of understanding concerning German reparations.

3. A desire on the part of European governments to force the United States to take the initiative in proposing some solution for the whole war debt reparations muddle.

The administration had earnestly hoped the Lausanne Conference would be held and that from it would emerge some agreement on the reparations tangle, but the hardboiled attitude of France, and Germany's insistence that she is finished with reparations payments, made the outlook for any agreement very dark indeed.

What the next step is to be no one in authority here cared to predict.

EPOCH-MAKING BROADCAST

New York City, Jan. 21.—Hailed by radio experts, editors and publishers as the outstanding achievement of radio news co-operation, the first broadcast from the Sino-Japanese battlefront was acclaimed today as epoch-making. The joint talk made by General Hujo, commander of the Japanese troops in Manchuria, and Floyd Gibbons, unrivaled headline hunter, assigned to cover the war in the Far East, was literally heard around the world. The voices of General Hujo and Gibbons were heard with exceeding clarity although they came from a distance of 13,000 miles.

FACES JURY TODAY

Phoenix, Arizona, Jan. 21.—Winsome Winnie Ruth Judd, frail, ethereal daughter of a Darlington, Indiana, preacher, was to go into court today to face a jury of middle-aged family men who will try her for the Phoenix "trunk murder" of which she is accused. For two days, Mrs. Judd sat unmoved while attorneys debated over qualifications of jurors. More than 200 persons tried to occupy the 85 spectators' seats in the court room. Mrs. Judd's every reaction during the questioning of jurors was noted. Her face did not change its expression. She managed to look squarely into the eyes of every man who passed through the jury box. Her thin hands, however, betrayed the inner agitation of the woman whose crime has earned her the title, "velvet tigress with the iron claws."

PUPILS HEAR OF GAME COMMISSION'S EFFORTS

Norman M. Wood Speaks at Bristol High; Also District Game Protector

FILMS ARE PROJECTED

Norman M. Wood, lecturer of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, and Warren Fretz, district game protector, spoke to 550 pupils at Bristol high school auditorium this morning.

Two reels of motion pictures were shown, one showing birds of prey; and the second depicting the sportsmen's program for the year. The hunting scenes were much enjoyed, deer, bears, hunting dogs, etc., being shown.

Mr. Fretz told of local game conditions; and Mr. Wood spoke to the students of the activities of the Pennsylvania Game Commission. He told of Governor Pinchot's desire for a closer affiliation between the farmer and the hunter.

It was stated that 100,000 deer were killed in a period of 13 days in Pennsylvania last fall. This drastic kill was made legal in order to equalize the sex, and to diminish the herd. The farmers have been helped to a great degree because of this, owing to the fact the large herd destroyed many crops. The kill in Pennsylvania during the hunting season of 1931 was larger than that of all other states in the union, and the largest record for any state.

S. LANGHORNE MEN DISCUSS NEW HIGHWAY

Thomas Ross, Esq., Doylestown, Addresses Meeting Held Last Night

MAY ENGAGE LAWYER

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Jan. 21.—At a postponed meeting of South Langhorne Business Men's Association, last evening, discussion was entered into regarding the proposed super-highway through Langhorne Manor borough, and desire of the business men here for straightening, widening and resurfacing of the present Lincoln Highway.

Thomas Ross, a Doylestown attorney, was present, informing the 48 men who had turned out, of details he had gathered relative to the present status of the proposed project.

The business men here desire to have the Lincoln Highway widened, their belief being the expense will be much less than if a new highway is constructed nearby. The Lincoln highway in this section is badly in need of repair, and many accidents occur on the thoroughfare in the locality where the highway is so narrow. In preference to having traffic diverted to a new highway which is under consideration, the men of South Langhorne and for many miles to the north and south of the borough, seek to have the present highway repaired and widened.

The association is considering the retention of Mr. Ross as its attorney to represent the association in the matter.

The next regular business meeting will occur in Wunsch's Restaurant, on Monday evening, February 1st.

2 MEN AND 2 WOMEN FROM BRISTOL HELD BY N. Y. POLICE IN CONNECTION WITH MURDER OF MAN IN BROOKLYN

Samuel Lasparella and Wife, John Marchetti and Theresa Zanzhi Taken in Round-Up of 12 and Charged With Being Implicated in the Murder of a Former Speakeasy Proprietor and Grocery Store Manager — All Are Well Known Here — To Stand Trial Today.

According to press dispatches, two men and a woman from Bristol and another woman who frequently visits here, are being held along with nine others in New York City in connection with a murder mystery there.

Those being held, are:

John Marchetti, 19, 201 New Brook street; Samuel Lasparella, 26, 1038 Trenton avenue; Mary Lasparella, 21, 1038 Trenton avenue; Theresa Zanzhi, 26, 890 Flushing avenue, New York.

According to police the Zanzhi woman is a former resident here and her maiden name was Lasparella. She married a well-known character, "Musky" Zanzhi, now said to be doing time in the New Jersey State Prison at Trenton, for carrying firearms.

Mary Lasparella is the wife of Samuel Lasparella, according to word given to the police at the Lasparella home, last night.

Samuel Lasparella was arrested here once for larceny and was given a suspended sentence by the Bucks County Court.

Today Chief of Police Linford Jones and County Detective Russo, along with Liborio Ladato, 905 Pond street, went to New York to see if Ladato could identify any of those being held, as the men who held Ladato up in his drug store on the night of January 9th. The descriptions of some of the men being detained in New York in this particular group resemble somewhat the two men who attempted to rob Ladato.

The 12 men and women were arrested in New York by the 88th Squad, New York City police, and will be given a hearing some time today in the 6th District Police Court.

One of the women and three men were charged with killing George Rasconda, 35, of Brooklyn, the former speakeasy proprietor, on December 19. The four, who identified themselves as Catherine Joyce, 29, a waitress; Andrew Perrone, 23; Joseph Carmato, 19, and Arcangelo Oppedisano, 23, all of Brooklyn, were arrested in a fashionable apartment building at 858 Myrtle avenue, in that city.

Mrs. Joyce said she was the daughter of a Mrs. Reims, of 2010 Spring Garden street, Philadelphia, but that she had left that city about two months ago. She said she had been separated from her husband, a taxicab driver, for about a year.

The story told by her and her male companions led police to 890 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn. There they arrested Mrs. Lasparella and Mrs. Zanzhi and five men on the charge of slaying James Dowling, 55, in an attempt to hold up a Fulton street grocery store, of which he was the manager, on April 17 last. Dowling was shot and killed when he resisted the intruders, police said.

Arrested with Mrs. Zanzhi and the Bristol residents were James Cassere, Salvatore LaCerbera, Carmine De Chire and Saverio Ferla, all of whom gave addresses in Brooklyn.

Marchetti is single and resides with his parents at 201 New Brook street. When informed last night that their son was being held by the New York police, the parents of the youth were greatly unnerved. They said that he left here Sunday.

It is believed that Samuel Lasparella and other members of the group were all in Bristol over the week-end and left here Tuesday in an automobile.

AN EDISON NEEDED

There is apparently no end to the subjects which may be investigated with benefit to humanity. Research in biology, chemistry, psychology and allied sciences is no longer surprising. The results are often amazing and recently marvelous and practical results have been obtained, but research in itself as an activity and urge seems in no wise startling. The public is more likely to be astonished by scientific examination of some of the common, every-day things which it accepts as blessings or otherwise.

One of the latter is glare from automobile headlights. Some manufacturers of lamps have tried various devices for filtering the light through dark glass, for shading the bulb, and for directing the rays downward, but so far as is known, none of these has been scientifically tested and found satisfactory and their production has been relatively haphazard.

The search for the non-glaring headlight and the 100 per cent efficient glare-eliminating windshield must go on. The reward for the discovery will be fewer traffic accidents, thousands of lives saved annually and faster and more comfortable night driving.

While manufacturers, scientists and inventors are on this quest let them also look about for a fog-piercing automobile light, a traffic light that will actually expedite traffic, an automobile horn that warns without wrecking heart and nerves and a fuel for motor that will make motoring more a pleasure than an expense.

HEALTH BY FORCE

Health is a matter of supreme importance to the individual and to the community. To discourage its conservation is far from the thoughts and intentions of anyone but it is in order to point out that enthusiasm for health crusades and particularly legal measures looking to the physical salvation of the populace are matters calling for a judicious mixture of common sense.

Unhappily it has not always been so. Health enthusiasts have a tendency to clutch at a theory for substance and impose its peculiar requirements upon the public, sometimes by violent measures.

There is, for example, the archaic law prohibiting expectoration on the sidewalks, a measure advocated to save humanity from the white plague. It never occurred to the father of the measure and to those who rigidly enforced it, if anyone ever did, that the tubercle bacillus was no less dangerous on one side of the curb than on the other. And although science has proved conclusively that this is not the source of the dread malady the no-spitting statutes still stand. Incidentally, intelligent people shouldn't need a law to tell them not to expectorate where others must walk.

Often the so-called health laws work principally for the benefit of the jobholders they create. Too often the jobholders are merely officious and all too often cause unreasonable inconvenience and even financial loss.

The Japs would like one sympathizer. They are praying to heaven to help their cause.

SYNOPSIS

In the Mexican desert, a masked rider, his gun still warm, hides in the sheltering mesquite as the cavalry ride past. They stop beside the prostrate figure of a man. "Lopez!" they exclaim, and a shiver runs through the group. A jeering laugh bursts down from above, and gazing up they see the masked rider outlined against the sky. Across the border, tall and handsome Ted Radcliffe arrives at Verdi Junction. He is met by a pretty girl who drives him to the home of his friend, Bob Harkness. She leaves without giving him her name. While waiting for Bob, Ted goes riding. He rescues a boy being beaten by two Mexicans in Paco Morales' employ. They threaten him with the vengeance of their leader, Jito. Later Ted meets his girl acquaintance of the morning at a dinner given by Major Blount of the U. S. Army. She is Adela Morales, niece of Paco Morales, the man of power in Mexico.

CHAPTER V

"What other lords of the earth do I meet tonight?" asked Radcliffe.

"The rest," replied Aunt Clara, "are mostly deuces and treys, except, of course, your host, Don Bob."

"Bob Harkness?"

"Yes. Out here he is Don Bob. But you probably know him well."

"No. Not well at all. I couldn't have been more than six years old when I saw him last. I remember a man with black hair and eyes that were gray. Eyes that always seemed smiling, as if at some secret jest. And a soft, slow voice. I remember wondering whether he was happy or sad. He took me up once in his arms and talked to me, but I can't recall one word he said. I must have been watching those eyes, for I've never forgotten them. Where he and my father first came together I never knew. Is Don Bob raising cattle?"

"Cattle and a few horses," replied the major. "In his spare time he is director of both banks here. But he comes and goes. Often absent for days out on the range. He has land and live stock on both sides of the border line."

The voices of arriving guests called the major and his wife away, and for the first time since morning Radcliffe found himself alone with the girl. The mask of aloofness and detachment had gone. He saw again the friendly, smiling eyes that had looked into his out on the desert.

Already guests were approaching, and, leaning down, Radcliffe spoke quickly: "I'm not allowed to sit by you at dinner. I want to warn you here and now I'm coming over to that feudal castle of your uncle's and make him let down the drawbridge some afternoon."

She laughed the same rippling laugh he had heard that morning. Raising a slender arm she pointed toward Mexico. "My friend," she replied, "there is an imaginary line about two miles south of us. You can't really see it and the country on both sides looks the same, but that imaginary line has certain effects. Over there you move into a land of old-world things, of formal things, and very strict ordering. Even big, good-looking giants over there can't just drop in, as you Americans say. They must be invited. And when they do come, they're expected to sit and discuss the weather very learnedly with all the rest of the family."

"That must be ghastly."

"Oh no. Not ghastly. One gets used to it—or pretends to. True, there are times when I think of setting fire to the place, or eloping with one of the vaqueros, but I never really do. I just want to. And that's had, isn't it, Ted Radcliffe?"

"But I may come just the same," he urged.

Someone was approaching. "But I may come just the same," he urged.

"Let's see what Uncle Paco says."

Once more that impassive mask had returned to the girl's face, and she turned abruptly toward the tall man who approached them.

Paco Morales had probably looked much the same for thirty years. His skin was a kind of pallid white that accentuated the blackness of his eyes and his thinning hair. The hands were small and carefully kept, and his infrequent smile held a charm. His eyes, intelligently alert, rested for a moment on the big American's face, then passed to his niece, and when he spoke the voice was deep and rich. "Hiding from me, chiquita?"

"I've been guarding the lion of the evening for you, my uncle. This is Aunt Clara's guest of honor, Mr. Radcliffe."

Very ceremoniously the Spaniard bowed. "I have heard of your coming, señor, I knew your father. A great man. Very—how do you say—audacious, very brilliant in the things of finance. He dreamed great dreams." The Spaniard bowed again. "You are most welcome."

"He seems to know that already," laughed the girl. "He is just warning me that he intends to come over to the hacienda."

"But certainly. We shall be charmed. You must come over next day of fiesta with Don Bob. We will show you how life is lived as our ancestors lived it since the time of the Conquerors."

"Not all our ancestors, uncle," smiled the girl.

"Not all of yours, little barbarian, but all of mine." He added in explanation: "Adela is only part Spanish. The rest, I apologize, is Irish and Mexican. That accounts for her demon's temper."

For a moment his deep-set eyes dwelt affectionately on the girl's face, then, as if dismissing the thought that held him, he asked abruptly: "You are a friend of Don Bob, no?"

"The son of his friend. My father and Bob Harkness were partners once. And I think rather once said you and he had interests together."

The Spaniard nodded. "Once, yes." For a moment his cold eyes flickered, and his lips seemed to pause on a question. But he only said: "A remarkable man, Don Bob. Perhaps the most remarkable in all this border country. He stands for everything I am opposed to—for the illusion of democracy and for the rights of the poor against his master. We hardly ever agree. Yet I have a very real affection for him. No one knows this borderland and its people so well as he."

"No one is so widely loved by the people," added Adela.

The old man nodded impatiently. "True, but I cannot include that among Don Bob's virtues. No. They love him, these vermin, because he shares their tortillas and plays with their brats—an untidy pastime. Only admissible—he smiled slightly—"when one is running for your American Congress."

A moment later dinner was announced. But the dark eyes of Paco Morales dwelt musingly on Radcliffe long after the younger man had turned away.

"Why are men so obvious?" the major's wife asked as Radcliffe seated her at the long table.

"It's part of our sterling simplicity—but what made you think of it?"

"My husband. He makes me think of all the masculine shortcomings from time to time. Just now I can see he is bursting to break some choice piece of news. He's waiting for a clue to lead naturally up to it, and if it doesn't come soon the dear man will explode one of those new shirt studs. I suspect it has something to do with our famous bandit, El Coyote, as they call him."

"I've heard you have an untamed bandit," Radcliffe replied. He looked about him. "Has he robbed anyone here?"

The question put a sudden end to the talk. As of one accord the little group about the candle-lit table turned toward Paco Morales. An air of tenseness seemed to have come upon the party. Morales alone seemed unconcerned, for he nodded toward the newcomer and smiled.

Will You Help Those who are Willing to Work?

A number of men, women and girls of various vocations, who are willing to work but cannot find employment, have registered with the Bristol Unemployment Bureau.

Many of these have dependents and are the heads of families who find themselves in stringent circumstances during this time of depression.

A list of all such persons is available to those desiring the services of such a person or persons, regardless of the length of time for which such employment might be offered.

You are asked to make some sacrifice. Do your share by providing work for one or several days at your home or place of business.

If those who are able will give employment to these folks and thus aid them to earn that which they need, they will be accomplishing a two-fold purpose.

COB LIT ASSUMES MANAGEMENT OF STORE

ected President at Recent Meeting of Board of Directors

ISSUES A STATEMENT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—Jacob D. L. was elected president of Lit Brothers store at a meeting of the board of directors.

He at once assumed active management of the store's business, issuing the following statement:

"At the request of the Directors and a number of the stockholders, I have agreed to accept the presidency of the corporation. At no time have I had any personal interest in the establishment and at no time have I been without financial interest in the store and its place in the commercial life of this, my home city, Philadelphia.

"It is the purpose of myself and my associates to put the direction of the store once more under the direct management of the personnel, which, in the past was so largely responsible for its success and for the high standing which is attained in the business life of Philadelphia.

"Our former merchandising policies will be resumed in full detail just as soon as that task can be accomplished. We propose, also, to cement cordial relationships with our customers and with the people of Philadelphia in general.

"In other words it is our purpose to put all our will and all our energies to the work in the determination to live up to our old-time slogan—a slogan of which we are proud in a sentimental way because of its traditional significance and to which we owe so great a share of our success. That slogan has been, is now and will continue to be: 'Dependable Goods at Lowest Prices.'

"Personally I am happy to be back in harness and to find myself once more in close association with the men and women with whom I worked in co-operation for so many years and to whom I owe and express gratitude for their faith and loyalty."

Mr. Lit's election to the presidency of Lit Brothers followed acceptance by the Board of Directors of the resignation of R. J. Goerke, former head of the City Stores Company, from the post which he held for more than three years.

Control of Lit Brothers was acquired by the City Stores Company, national department store chain, in October 1928. The Goerke interests withdrew from the City Stores Company management on Wednesday.

Albert M. Greenfield, Philadelphia, is named chairman of the Board of Directors, and Dr. Paul Saunders, New Orleans investment banker, president, of the City Stores Company under a reorganization effected last week. Greenfield is chairman of the board of Bankers Securities Corporation which is one of the bankers of the department store chain.

The Board of Directors of Lit Brothers was reorganized in December with a number of prominent Philadelphians named to succeed retiring members of the directorate. Harry G. Sundheim, widely-known local attorney and counsel for the Bankers Securities Corporation, was named to the Lit Brothers' board as was Maurice L. Wurtzel, president of the Bankers Bond & Mortgage Company, and George H. Johnson, vice-president of Albert M. Greenfield & Co.

The firm of Lit Brothers, which does an annual business of approximately $30,000,000, was founded in 1892 by Samuel D. and Jacob D. Lit and a widowed sister, Mrs. Rachel Arnold. It began business as a small general merchandise shop occupying two store fronts at 45 and 47 N. Eighth street.

From that modest beginning the business expanded gradually, moving to a Market street front in a short time. Then year after year its increasing trade demanded more and more space for new departments until the store finally occupied its present site of an entire block bounded by Seventh, Eighth, Market and Filbert streets.

One daughter of Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Milton Herold, has been active in the business management, serving as a vice-president. Mrs. Jules E. Mastbaum, widow of the moving picture theatre magnate, who founded the Stanley Company of America, is another daughter of Mrs. Arnold.

Two years after the opening of the business at 45 and 47 North Eighth street, Lit Brothers moved to the northeast corner of Eighth and Market streets where they rented the basement and the two lower floors of the building that had formerly been the home of the wholesale drug house of George W. Carpenter.

Within four months of the time they occupied the corner property the Lits took over the two upper floors. A little over a year later they annexed the McFadden store, adjoining on Market street, and another store adjoining on Eighth street.

That year they extended further along Market street by taking in Schwenk and Stellwagen's place. In rapid order came the annexation of properties that had been occupied by the Apple Brothers, Tracey, Morris and Company, and Howel, Warner & Company. Before the end of the '90's they had secured the Market street store of J. B. Lippincott and Company, the Filbert street warerooms of Joel J. Bailey. After the destruction of the Partridge and Richardson store and the Lippincott publishing house by fire in 1899, the way was open for still further expansion. Incorporation came in 1900, a continuous chain of rebuilding and remodeling was under way, and, before another decade passed, the Lit establishment marched down Market street to Seventh and secured the use of nearly the entire block, the last step, within recent memory, being the construction of a new building on the Seventh street and giving them complete possession of the block bounded by Market and Filbert and Seventh and Eighth streets.

Within a little more than a quarter of a century Philadelphia saw the two brothers rise from obscurity to prominence as merchants, civic leaders and philanthropists, both of them self-made men. Their father had kept a tailor shop at 1710 Market street where both were born in the combined store and dwelling which the family occupied at that address over sixty years ago.

DOYLESTOWN TO BE HOST TO LEGION POSTS

Will Entertain Bucks-Montgomery Legionnaires on Armistice Day

EXPECT 10,000 VISITORS

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 21.—Commander James B. Fretz, of the A. R. Atkinson, Jr., Post No. 210, American Legion, announced definitely today that Doylestown will entertain the Bucks and Montgomery county posts of the American Legion on Armistice Day this year, Friday, November 11th.

This means that Doylestown will have at least 10,000 visitors and the biggest and most colorful parade in the history of the town.

Doylestown was definitely selected for the ninth Legion district celebration when the Pottstown American Legion Post yesterday agreed to withdraw their bid for this year's big event so that Doylestown can have this honor, on condition that Pottstown will have the celebration in 1933.

"I am sure that Doylestown and all of the Bucks county posts will favor Pottstown for the 1933 Armistice Day celebration," Post Commander Fretz said today.

Several weeks ago the proposition of staging the "big day" in Doylestown was advanced by the Atkinson Post, and endorsed by Burgess George S. Hotchkiss. For several years it has been the desire of the local World War veterans to entertain their comrades in Doylestown, and the fact that Doylestown has been selected as the official convention town for Armistice Day, is a distinct honor not only for the town but for Bucks county. The Armistice Day parade of the district has never before been held in Bucks county.

There will be several thousand uniformed men in line of march in addition to the thousands of visitors this celebration attracts annually.

At the next meeting of the Atkinson Post on February 1, Post Commander Fretz will appoint the necessary committees to complete plans for the celebration. It will be the raising of a fund of $1,000 among the residents of the town and the merchants and business men of the town have agreed to co-operate with the veterans in making this a banner day for Doylestown by supporting the campaign to the limit. It is planned to have the $1,000 raised by July 1.

District Commander Leon Walp, of Royersford, officially notified Post Commander Fretz yesterday that Doylestown has been selected for the official Armistice Day celebration this year.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

A TALE OF SHIPWRECK AND CANNED MILK

MAYBE some of you remember the tale of the freighter Trevesa, which foundered at sea in the middle of a June night in 1923, after sending out an S O S call. Other ships answered that S O S, but by the time they got there they found not a trace of the wreck or of the crew. Finally, after days of searching, they gave up, and the loss of the Trevesa was put down as another tragic mystery of the sea.

Three weeks later—but that is getting ahead of the story I want to tell this morning because it concerns those who sail the sea—those who must be considered in the broad drama of food.

There is one food that plays a title role in this particular drama—and that food is milk.

I think we can say with reasonable certainty that if it had not been for the canned milk they had in their lifeboats, the crew of the Trevesa would hardly have lived through those terrible three weeks they spent on the Indian Ocean, after their ship sank under them. To be sure, they had hard ship's biscuits aboard the lifeboats, too; but after a few days the men suffered so terribly from thirst that they could not eat the choking dry biscuits.

The Trevesa, as it happens, is not carrying a cargo of food on this last voyage of hers. Her hold, in fact, is loaded with zinc concentrate, which she took aboard at Port Pirie, in South Australia, to deliver to Antwerp, Belgium. She steams along the southern coast of Australia and up to Fremantle, which is near Perth, on the west coast. Here she fills her bunkers with coal and sets out on the long journey across the Indian Ocean.

And almost at once she runs into nasty weather. The last days of May mean spring in our northern hemisphere, but south of the equator it is winter; and the winter gales are sweeping this part of the Indian Ocean.

On the third of June, one of the seamen, Michael Scully, notices a queer sound—the swishing sound of water in the hold. This is not right. He calls Captain Foster; and the Captain listens, and sure enough, above the howl of the storm and the straining of the ship he too hears that ominous little sound. Well, not a matter to worry about, perhaps; he orders the men to man the pumps. But the pumps do not get the water out. It is soon clear what has happened. The pumps go deep down into the ship where water from a leak would naturally settle. But this water hasn't settled there. It can't get down through the cargo of cement-like zinc concentrate. The water stays on top, where the pumps are powerless to get at it.

And bit by bit it is forcing the bow of the vessel down into the sea. "Get the lifeboats ready," orders Captain Foster. The boats already contain drinking water, and biscuits. Quickly some extra tins of biscuits, two more small casks of water, and those six cases of condensed milk are put into the boats. The last S O S is sent out; the boats are lowered; and at two-fifteen A. M. on that bitter black night, seas running high, gale blowing, the men cast off. A half-hour later the Trevesa goes to the bottom.

Captain Foster decides to make for the nearest land to the west—the little island of Rodriguez, 1700 miles away. Being on the sea in a lifeboat is no new experience for him. He was torpedoed during the war, in the cold north Atlantic, and lived through nine freezing days in an open boat, bringing most of his men safely to the coast of Spain. It was this experience that taught him the value of canned milk.

So the boats put up sail. It is a strange and terrible journey that follows. One biscuit each day is all each man is allowed; one mouthful of water; and a tin box full of condensed milk—about four teaspoons.

After a time, as I said, they can no longer eat the biscuits. But the milk keeps them alive.

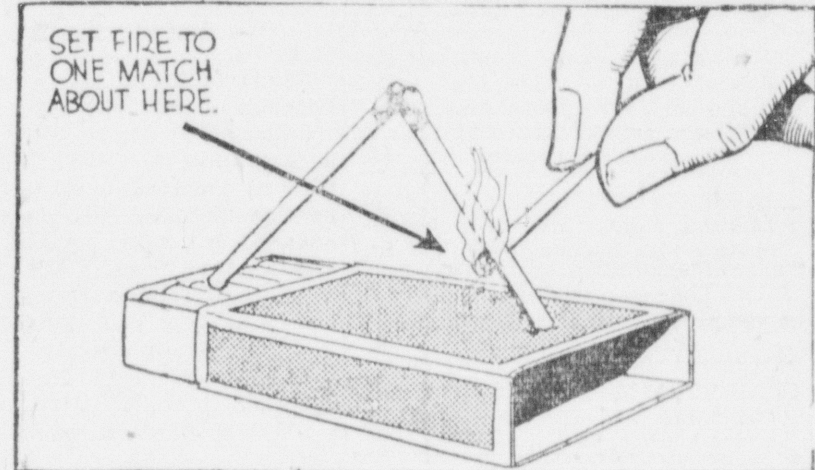

Three long weeks of this—and then one day—land!

The news flashed all over the world. It seemed as though the men had returned from the dead.

And once again those who sail the sea had shown us what men can do in the face of hardship.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by WILL L. LINDHORST

THE LOVING MATCHES

There is no magic connected with this trick; it is merely intended for a little fun. Jokingly tell your audience you can make such inert things as matches fall in love. Stand two together in tent-shape arrangement on a matchbox, with the heads touching, and support them by sticking the ends in the box. Light another match and apply it to one of those standing as shown in the above drawing. The flame will ignite the sulphur heads, and they will cling together, as though kissing. As the sticks burn, they will curl up slowly, and eventually topple over. You can laughably say that the matches curl up in the ecstasy of the kiss and fall over from exhaustion.

"OUR BOYS"

Do you ever recall
When you were a boy,
The things that
You used to do;
Then, when you're correcting
The boy of today,
Give him a chance
To come through.

Don't make the boys cringe,
Crawl at your feet;
But give them
A helping hand;
Try guiding them on
To worthier things,
Make each a
Better man.

You never can conquer
The world by hate;
It's often been tried

And failed.
Love is more potent
Than any maled fist,
It's the only thing
That's availed.

Have every boy look
With cheery eye
To you and proudly say
That you always tried
To guide them right
Along life's bitter way.

A man's not a man
Who will injure a boy,
The most wretched
Of mortals is he.
Let's all in the future
Try helping our boys,
So they'll be what
We want them to be.

Boy Scout Council Pays
Tribute to Deceased MemberBy Bucks County Council
Boy Scouts of America

J. E. W. Tracy, chairman of the Civic Service Committee of the Bucks County Boy Scout Council, who lived at Bristol, died last Thursday. He was buried on Monday at Chatham, N. J. A Scout Honor Guard with Colors, and bugler were present at the grave with Scout Executive William F. Livermore.

Mr. Tracy had been a member of the Council Executive Board for two years, and had previous to that time served in many helpful capacities. As the leader of the Civic Service Committee he had developed a program of the Boy Scouts throughout the county doing many projects such as a county-wide distribution of American Red Cross publicity, food baskets and repairing of toys at Christmas, a community good turn of removing sharp tire piercing objects from the highways, and the starting of a yearly good turn to the sponsoring institution of each unit.

One of his greatest contributions to Scouting in our County was his guidance of the Indian lore program in the Indian Village at Bucon, the year-round Boy Scout camp. Mr. Tracy, with his extensive experience from many travels through Indian Reservations on his annual crops study trips for the Landreth Seed Company of Bristol, became familiar with the life and habits of the Redskins. With Village Chief Eagle Scout Carl Leidy, of Doylestown, and Village Medicine Man Eagle Scout Wayne Warner, of Bristol, many conferences were held with Mr. Tracy on the program, living conditions, and crafts of the Indians. The valuable and interesting program of the Bucon Indian Village during the past two summers has been through the guidance given by Mr. Tracy.

Though the Great Scoutmaster has seen fit to call to him one of our leaders the result of his labor is being shown, and will remain in developing the character of the boys of our county.

Depression Hits the Diamond Stars

Old Man Depression is taking his toll in the baseball market and the number of holdouts increases as contracts for the coming season reach their destinations. Mel Ott, of the Giants, is the first of the announced holdouts to fall in line and sign up at a reduced figure. Mel's teammates, Bill Terry and Fred Fitzsimmons, have stated they will not sign, Terry going so far as to declare his wish that the Giants trade him. Hack Wilson, late of the Cubs but now of the Cards, doesn't like the salary offer of his new bosses and is still unsigned. While the great Babe Ruth cannot be listed as a holdout, the Bambino is hoping for a two-year agreement at the $70,000 figure (a cut of $10,000) offered for one year by Col. Ruppert, owner of the Yanks. Dazzy Vance, the Robins' great pitcher, has been cut from $23,000 to $15,000 and says nothing doing. Others of lesser prominence are lining up for the "holdout championship," but our bet is that all will be on hand when their teams start Spring practice. Maybe somebody will tell the boys it's kind of tough landing a job on the outside.

An Epidemic of "Holdouts"?

By HARDIN BURNLEY

HOLD-OUTS!

SOME HIGH SALARIED BOYS WHO MAY HAVE "CONTRACT TROUBLE" THIS SPRING—

RUTH $80000
WILSON $35000
SIMMONS $30000
GROVE $25000
COCHRANE
EARNSHAW
GEHRIG
VANCE $23000
TERRY $22500
FOXX $20000
ETC.

THE HOLD-OUT SEASON IS ON IN EARNEST!

MIKE DONLIN—
--OLD-TIME
HURLER OF THE GIANTS—HE ONCE PULLED A HISTORIC ALL-SEASON
HOLD-OUT!

WILL the threatened slicing of big league salaries bring an avalanche of holdouts this 1932 baseball season? Well, we shall see.

At the recent joint meeting of the American and National leagues in Chicago, the magnates voted a general reduction in salaries, and it's a sure thing that those young athletes whose contracts expired last October are due for a shock when Mr. Letter Carrier delivers the new unsigned offering. Regardless of their success on the diamond last season, each one of them will be asked to accept a salary revision—and needless to say the revision will not be upward. Also the magnates propose not to offer any contracts of more than one year duration and they will trim training expenses. All this economy, they claim, is necessary to prevent possible losses this year.

Sounds practical, but how will the boys take the cut? Some of them, used to drawing down the heavy sugar for some years past, no doubt will squawk and will kick back with a threat to hold out! Yes, the present outlook seems to indicate lots of fireworks before the boys get going in another campaign.

There may be one or two exceptions to the "cutting" rule. One notable exception will be "Pepper" Martin, whose sensational playing with the Cards in the World Series warrants a substantial increase. The Cardinal management can afford to raise the ante for "Pepper," however, for he is not one of the high-priced players of the big time.

Should "holdoutitis" become a popular illness this year, we shall probably see a few all-season holdouts. Mike Donlin, one-time star of the New York Giants, set the precedent in long hold-outs. Mike when the club refused to meet his demands, simply stayed by the old fireside and let the Giants get along as best they could. More recently Ed Roush, Red outfielder, pulled the same stunt.

It is even rumored that the players, in retaliation, will organize a union or something to protect themselves and to enable them to combat the magnates with unity. If this should happen it will not be anything new, for more than forty years ago players of the National League banded together in a sort of brotherhood for their mutual protection. Then a quarter of a century later a similar experiment was tried, but it, too, faded before the magnate's firm resistance.

Those high-salaried players like Ruth, Wilson, Vance, Gehrig and a host of others seem slated for salary slashes. In the case of Ruth that coming Spring battle of the "fountain-pens" will tell the tale. It is possible that the Babe may be forced to accept a cut, but with a bonus proviso that will enable him to earn his $80,000 IF—and it's a big IF, for the Babe is not getting any younger—he has a good season.

Well, "holdoutitis" may become epidemic!
